The availability, possession, purchase, sale, advertising, transportation, delivery, and consumption of cannabis may be prohibited or restricted depending upon your location.

You are responsible for understanding and complying with laws applicable to you.

Access to Canoja or information appearing on Canoja does not mean that a cannabis-related activity is legal in your jurisdiction.

5. Licensing and Compliance Information

Canoja is developing technology designed to help consumers discover cannabis-related operators and better understand publicly available licensing information.

Canoja does not issue cannabis licenses, approve operators, enforce cannabis regulations, or act as a government regulatory authority.

Business, licensing, registration, or compliance information may originate from government agencies, regulators, public registries, operator submissions, and other permitted data sources.

Although Canoja seeks to provide useful and accurate information, regulatory information can change, contain errors, experience publication delays, or differ among official sources.

Canoja may modify, postpone, restrict, or discontinue pre-launch programs or planned features.

7. Communications

If you request Canoja launch announcements, early-access notifications, or promotional communications, Canoja may contact you using the information you provide.
